Biographical/Historical note

Lun Ye (Lonnie) Crimm Barefield was the College and Career Center Coordinator at Evanston Township High School from 1977-2000. She was also on the Glencoe Historical Society Board of Directors (through at least 2009) and a trustee, treasurer, vice president and president of the Glencoe Public Library from 2001 to 2009. She was a representative in 2001-2004 and 2007-2009 for the North Suburban Library System and a member and board member 2002-2004. Barefield is the recipient of 2002 Gayle C. Wilson Award (NACAC). Besides being also on the board of directors for the Evanston Community Foundation, Barefield took part in the League of Women Voters and attended Second Baptist Church in Evanston. Lun Ye's husband, Morris Barefield, was the first African-American classroom teacher at New Trier High School.

Scope and Contents note

The Lun Ye Crimm Barefield Collection is arranged into three series: "Personal Documents," "Oral Communications Introduction Research," and "Local History." The collection spans from the 1940's to 2005, though the bulk is from 1968-1999. It includes newspaper clippings relating to the Barefield family as well as to local African-American history; photographs from Black History Month at Evanston Township High School; Portraits of Lun Ye and her husband, Morris Barefield; and lessons intended to introduce Oral Communication to children.
